LB 799 changes state and local building code provisions by adopting the International Existing Building Code and repealing the Uniform Code for Building Conservation.

Comments/Analysis:

LB 799 changes the state building code to strike the Uniform Code for Building Conservation from the statute and include the 2009 Edition of the International Existing Building Code.

This bill also establishes that the state building code shall be applicable to all buildings owned by the state or a state agency, and each political subdivision that elects to adopt the state building code or any component or combination of components of the state building code.
