This bill, as amended, would provide for setting aside certain misdemeanor and felony convictions.

In 2017, the Supreme Court states that this bill could increase court workload, but determining the increase and the need for additional resources is difficult at this time. Additionally, the Supreme Court notes that felony convictions are completed at the district court level which would be a county expense. See the Supreme Court's response attached for additional details.

In 2017, the Attorney General estimates no fiscal impact from this bill.

Explanation of Estimate:

LB350 establishes a procedure for setting aside misdemeanor and felony convictions in cases where a person received a sentence other than probation or fine. Judicial and court workload will increase as a result. Determining how much workload will increase, and therefore the need for additional staff and other resources, is difficult at this time.

Note:

1. Felony convictions are in many cases completed at the district court level. Any additional staff or resources, at this level of court, would be a county expense.
2. LB350 also allows for the new procedure to be applied retroactively, which has the potential to further increase workload.
