LB 356 provides that a nonpublic school which rejects an application for admission of a child with a disability will not be eligible to participate in school-sponsored co-curricular or extracurricular activities as defined in the bill. The nonpublic school may participate in the activities if the school district of residence of such child is reimbursed for its actual expenses of providing special education and transportation services for the child.

The bill may have a fiscal impact for public and nonpublic schools involved in the education of a child with a disability in instances where the child was denied admission to a nonpublic school. The nonpublic school may opt to reimburse the public school for the cost of special education services and transportation for the child with a disability. If so, the public school will have increased revenue from the nonpublic school which will be considered an accountable receipt for purposes of state aid. The increase in resources for the public school may decrease state aid paid two years after the increase in resources occurs.

The State Department of Education does not have information showing the number of children with disabilities who are rejected for admission to a nonpublic school. It is assumed there will be very few children affected by the bill so any fiscal impact will be minimal.
