LB174 would enact provisions establishing certain duties and limitations relating to financial institutions and their administration of merchant accounts that facilitate credit and debit card transactions. LB174 provides that the Attorney General may maintain a civil action for violations of certain provisions of the bill. The extent to which violations of these provisions might occur is indeterminate. The extent to which the Attorney General might pursue civil actions relating to such violations is similarly uncertain as would be any impact on the agency in terms of related efforts to address such violations.
